Systemfehler - Project Description (EN)

What is Systemfehler?
Systemfehler ("system failure" or "system error") is a non-profit project. It helps people find important information about social help more easily. The information is easy to understand, available in different languages, and free for everyone.

Why are we doing this?
Government help is often hard to understand or find. Many websites are confusing or only in German. We want to change that, so people can know their rights and options.

What is the goal?
Systemfehler collects information from official websites (like government or help centers). The system sorts the information and makes it easier to understand. Experts can check or improve the texts. The final content is shown on one clear website — as a helpful tool, not a replacement for real services.

How does it work?

- The system regularly checks trusted websites.
- It reads out texts (from web pages or PDFs).
- The information is saved in a clear structure.
- Experts can help make it easier to read and translate it.
- All info is shown on an accessible website, in simple and clear language.

What does the website offer?

- Easy info about rights, help options, and applications
- Filters by topic, region, or target group
- News updates in plain language
- Links to contact persons, forms, and help centers
- Useful tools like a rent cost calculator

Open Source and Community
Systemfehler is open source and free. Everyone can use and improve it. We welcome help — especially for translating or checking the content.

Project status
The project is still in an early phase. It's a side project. Right now, we pay all costs ourselves. In the future, we're looking for help with hosting and development.
